

Journal of Paramedic Practice is the new peer-reviewed and evidence-based journal, launching in October 2008, for paramedics, emergency care practitioners and assistants, medical technicians, paramedic practitioners, critical care paramedics, combat medical technicians, and members of voluntary aid societies.

Journal of Paramedic Practice would like to hear from anyone who wishes to contribute to the journal. We publish clinical reviews, original research, discussion of professional issues and education articles on all aspects of paramedic practice.

GET YOUR WORK PUBLISHED IN *JPP

In addition to a supportive peer review process to guide new authors, we are holding a writing workshop for those of you thinking of taking your first steps in writing for publication.

Date: Wednesday 13 August 2008, 1-5pm

Location: University of Hertfordshire, Hatfield Campus

Dr Julia Williams, Principal Lecturer and Research Lead in Paramedic Science at the University of Hertfordshire and a member of the Journal's editorial advisory board, together with the Editor, Vicqui Stuart-Jones, will guide participants through the basics of writing for a peer-reviewed journal.

Places for this FREE workshop are limited so to book yours email jpp@markallengroup.com (with "writing workshop" in the subject line) today.
